'Barbaric' scenes as export is forced to turn back

By Dean Kilpatrick

dean.kilpatrick@archant.co.uk

RSPCA chief executive Gavin Grant has lodged an official complaint after a boat containing live animals shipped through the Port of Ramsgate was forced to turn back due to adverse weather conditions.

Mr Grant has called the decision to allow a live export shipment in gale force winds as "barbaric" after the former Soviet boat Joline struggled to cope with the high winds.

The vessel arrived back at the Port of Ramsgate last Wednesday and a shipment was exported through the port on Thursday night.

Protestors said the bad weather was predicted, and the shipment should not have been allowed to leave the Kent port.

Shipping forecasts suggested severe storm force ten gales would strike the English Channel before the ship set out.

The RSPCA chief, Mr Grant, said: "It is barbaric that animals are at sea on open decks in these appalling weather conditions. This ship is designed to work in rivers, not in the open sea.

"We are lodging a complaint with the appropriate authorities and expect a full investigation into why this ship was allowed to sail.'

Cllr Ian Driver said he will be calling for a full investigation into the incident and would check to see if all procedures were carried out.

JG SUSPECT RAIDS

MORE than 100 police officers swooped in a number of dawn raids in the latest effort to crack down on the menace of drugs on

Cops smashed down doors of suspected dealers in Margate on Thursday morning as part of an on-going operation to catch those peddling their deadly wares.

Drugs including crack cocaine, heroin and cannabis were found at a number of properties targeted, whilst stolen property was also recovered.

The latest phase of Operation Regency, which targets drug dealers and burglars, sprang into life after a three month long intelligence-led investigation by the Kent and Essex Serious Crime Directorate.

Officers said street-level drug dealers 'preyed on vulnerable people", and were determined to eradicate the problem.

A MAN and his daughter were rushed to hospital following a fire in their Broadstairs home last week.

The man, thought to be in his late 50s, had fallen asleep on the sofa in his Northwood Road bungalow on Wednesday evening and woke to find that wet washing, left drying on a clothes airer in front of an open fire, had caught light.

The pair escaped the property and while the daughter called the fire service, her father attempted to go back inside their home to tackle the fire with a garden hose, breathing in smoke in the process.

Widow is set to coin it in after rare find could fetch £120,000

By Chrissie Daniels

chrissie.daniels@archant.co.uk

WHEN a widow discovered an old coin of her late husband's in a chest of drawers, she could not have dreamed of what it was worth.

But when she took it, along with two silver coins, to be valued by a local auctioneer, it became apparent she had in her possession something of huge interest.

And next month it goes under the auctioneer's hammer with an estimated value of up to £120,000.

The finder, who wishes to remain anonymous, had taken the coins to auctioneers Gorringes in Tunbridge Wells.

Upon inspection, staff member Leslie Gillham realised the gold coin was in fact one of the most collectable and expensive

Mr Gillham said he was left

He said: "When the lady came in I was not wonderfully enthusiastic as most aren't worth anything.

"She gave me two silver crowns and I thought 'shame you haven't got any gold coins'. Then she produced the five guinea piece which made my eyes nearly pop out of my head. My first thought was it must be a fake.

The coin dates back to 1703 when Queen Anne began her reign - and was made with gold captured from Spanish galleons at the Battle of Vigo Bay.

CELEBRATING A GREAT VICTORY

On October 12, 1702, a powerful Anglo-Dutch fleet under the command of Admiral Sir George Rooke was returning from a failed attempt to capture Cadiz, when it engaged with and destroyed a Franco-Spanish bullion fleet sheltering in Vigo Bay on the north eastern coast of Spain.

Such was the overwhelming success of the action that, despite the fact the Spanish had already offloaded most of the treasure, it served as a major propaganda victory, distracting public attention from the previous disastrous assault on Cadiz.

Transported with great pageantry to the Royal Mint was just 7lb 8oz of the plundered gold along with 4,500lb of silver. It was

Website's clues to mystery dead

A NATIONAL website containing details of 24 unsolved Kent mystery death cases has gone live in a bid to spark new information to identify victims

The Missing Persons Bureau says the site is the first in the UK dedicated to unidentified people - both dead and alive.

The Kent cases date between 1971 and 2002. The most historic involves a man aged between 30 and 50 with unknown ethnicity who was washed ashore at Lydd-on-Sea on October 5,

Just two cases involve women. One was a white European woman aged between 45 and 50, found in Folkestone Harbour on January 3, 1979. She'd been dead just a few hours, but despite appeals, was never identified.

And a woman with an ovarian cyst was found at the bottom of Dover cliffs in August 2000.

A male, in his early 60s, was recovered from the sea at Dover in October 1980, and others were found on railway lines, roadsides, and other public places. A spokesman for the site said: "It will bring closure to families and friends if an individual is identified." The site's address is www.missingpersons.police.uk.

MAN IN THE MIDDLE: KCCC's chief exec Jamie Clifford sent a letter to non-playing staff explaining the current economic problems the club is now facing

Storm clouds looming over cricket club as staff warned of redundancies

By Greg Miles

greg.miles@archant.co.uk

STAFF at Kent County Cricket Club have been told they may face the axe as the cash-strapped club are bracing themselves for "very disappointing" financial figures for the year.

The news will come as a surprise to supporters who thought the club was turning a corner after extensive redevelopment of its Canterbury head-quarters – a multi-million pound move designed to turn it into a year-round business.

But the economic situation has hit it hard, along with a wet summer which washed out many of its key money-making matches.

The club's chief executive Jamie Clifford admitted a thorough review of its business could "unfortunately lead to a potential redundancy situation".

In a letter to staff, Mr Clifford said: "This has been an extremely tough year for the club and the financial results for 2011-12 are likely to be very disappointing. The combination of poor weather this summer and the difficult economic climate has knocked us off course.

"This is hugely frustrating because I believe that we are doing many things right; the ground redevelopment, recent sponsorship successes and improved playing performance have all been very encouraging.

"Ultimately though, the business cannot sustain annual losses and as such, we need to review how we are operating."

Now under way, that review will look at "all potential cost-saving measures" which will include "staff resourcing levels".

Mr Clifford added: "It's a cost saving process; you can do that in many ways.

"If I said we were reducing the amount of grass and fertiliser we ordered that could be one option. We are at the earliest stage in the process.

"My overriding priority is to consider the welfare of the staff. That's why they have had a letter as soon as any process that involves them starts."

Staff have been invited to offer up alternatives in a bid to reduce the pressure on the wage bill.

It is not the first time the club has been forced to take such action.

There were redundancies in both 2009 and 2010, as the club sought to balance its books in the face of a squeeze on spending.

However, last year it recorded an operating profit of £188,000, which was in stark contrast

ROB MAKES KEY MOVE

ROB Key confirmed he was stepping down as captain this week – and will be replaced by England international James Tredwell.

Key, 33, had been skipper for seven years, after taking over in 2005 from Dave Fulton.

He said he felt "worn out" after his time in charge, and had decided it was time to hand over the leadership.

He said: "At the end of the summer I was tired and had had enough really. I wanted to concentrate on my own game and

Pensioner wins support in row over loud music in gym

A PENSIONER who cut up his gym membership in a protest at the loud music being played during his early morning work-outs, has won the backing of Age UK.

David Richer, 75, was left fuming by the noisy music pumped into the gym at the Marsh Academy Leisure Centre in Romney Marsh.

He was so incensed he ended his £30-a-month membership and swapped his two-hour 7am workout for his push bike. And his stance was followed by other OAPs, who followed him out the door.

Age UK, which offers support services for the elderly, said Mr Richer was right to make a stand.

Paul Owen, chief executive officer for the Faversham branch, said: "I admire the pensioners for standing up for their rights. There needs to be a compromise to suit all tastes."

The gym is part of the local school and was built in 1982, partly funded by Sport England.

Keith Norman, director of finance and resources at the Marsh Academy, said: "We are very sorry that Mr Richer has decided to leave. The majority of people do prefer to have music playing – it's not desperately loud in our opinion.

"We have 500 members at the gym and we are sorry Mr Richer feels the way he does.

"The music played is fairly easy listening stuff. It's not heavy metal stuff."

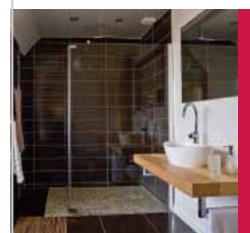

Manager Jason Mahoney added: "We do have people who want us to play it louder, and some want it quieter. We can't please all the people all the time."

PCC Barnes promises personal touch as link between us and police

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

"EVERY family and every community; their problems are my problems" - that's the message from Kent's new Police and Crime Commissioner, Ann Barnes.

The former teacher, who chaired the Kent Police Authority for six years, stormed to victory in the first-ever PCC election last week, beating off rivals with a huge 45.9 per cent of the vote in the first count.

Going head-to-head with Conservative rival Craig Mackinlay in the second count, the independent candidate secured a massive 65.5 per Speaking to KoS in the week she was sworn into the office, she said this was a new beginning, not just for her, but for people in Kent.

"For the first time there will be a person people can go to with their problems in policing; one person to be the link to the force," she said.

"My intentions are quite clear; every family and every community - their problems are my problems. So often people who are in public service positions sit at the top of the hierarchy, away from the public – I will be out there in the community.

"Kent is going to have the most accessible PCC in the country. I will be that first link for people

"There's a lot to do. I haven't made sweeping promises I won't keep - we see that all the time in politics. I made specific promises in response to genuine needs in Kent.'

She admitted times were tough financially, with Kent Police having to make huge savings amounting to £50 million over four years, which has resulted in officer and civilian job losses.

"Savings have already been delivered in Kent Police, but what does worry me is that this government may cut police funding more," said Mrs Barnes.

"I will fight that to the bitter end to ensure visible community policing in Kent."

Mrs Barnes, from Lyminge near Folkestone, replaces the Kent Police Authority. She is responsible for governing the local police force and holding the Chief Constable to account for the performance of Kent Police.

She has the power to hire and fire the Chief Constable, draw up and publish a police and crime plan, set the policing priorities and detail how and where money is spent.

Chief Constable Ian Learmonth remains responsible for operational matters, but Mrs Barnes holds the force to account and is "the voice of the people"

She will pick up an £85,000 salary and will be up for re-election in May 2014, when the next PCC poll will be held to coincide with local council elections.

Her activities will be scrutinised by the Police and Crime Panel, made up of councillors from all the districts in Kent and a number of independent members.

Mrs Barnes said: "Policing is a very complex world. Kent Police has a budget of £270m that's a lot of money, but setting the budget and the policing plan is tricky to do.

"Somebody coming into this with no experience would have struggled; they would have had to have spent time having to learn how to do this.

"I don't, I'm used to doing it, I've got that under my belt already so I can push on and use

Spoilt ballot papers sign of voters' anger

FIGURES for last week's Police and Crime Commissioner poll have revealed thousands of people spoiled their ballot papers.

In the first count of the supplementary vote system, some 3,931 voters spoiled their papers, making them void by either marking them incorrectly or failing to cast a vote altogether.

More than 6,440 voters, failed to choose a preference in the second choice option.

While spoiled papers are not unusual in an election, PCC Ann Barnes said some of these spoiled papers were in protest.

'Laet cross when I hear people talking about apathy in these elections. It wasn't apathy, it was anger and that was seen in the number of spoiled ballots," she said.

"People wanted to vote, but they didn't know about the elections; they didn't know much about the role; it was held in November when elections aren't usually held. People damaged their votes in anger.

'This was supposed to an important election, but did you ever hear the Prime Minister talking about it?"

She added: "The people spoke; they did not want a political party. I felt humbled by the confidence people have shown in me.

A measly 16.3 per cent of the Kent electorate – just 208,782 of 1.2 million eligible to vote - turned out to the polls this time wisely, start the hard work in delivering my promises.

Mrs Barnes said she will work to make policing accessible.

"I will map the places and times when people can access police, so people in every ward know when and where they can speak to their local PCSO and police officers.

"I will set up local policing boards to allow the public to have more say in the different areas of Kent. This county has three diverse areas; west Kent is different to north Kent, for example, and they are different to south Kent.

"People who sit on these local boards would come from those areas.

"I'm also setting up a fleet of 'mini-mobiles' to travel to rural areas and deal with policing issues there. We have communities which are quite Mrs Barnes said the process for taking on a youth police and crime commissioner - one of her pledges before the election – would soon start.

"I want them to be the face of Kent's young people and the link between young people and the police. They will bridge the gap," she said.

"I'm quite open-minded about who it could be; it could be a school leaver, a university graduate or someone who doesn't have a job.

"Young people commit crime, but young people are also victims of crime."

She said she will support victims by giving them the means to see progress in police investigations.

SPIRITUAL ISM

Mum reveals how dead son writes her letters from beyond the grave

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

WHEN Sally Woodmansee's son was tragically killed in a car crash two years ago she, like anyone to suffer bereavement, thought it was the last she would ever see or hear from her beloved boy.

But in what is thought to be an extraordinary spiritual phenomenon, the 52-year-old claims her dead son Tony is communicating with her from beyond the grave – writing her letters every day.

Mum-of-five Mrs Woodmansee, from Herne Bay, says Tony, who was just 20 when he died, "speaks" to her through what is known as "automatic spiritual writing".

Every morning at 6am, she sits in a darkened room with a notepad and pen. Her arm starts to glide, writing page after page of thoughtful script.

The hairdresser insists she has no control over her arm and that, instead, Tony is in control, sending her messages from the afterlife.

"I'd never been spiritual before and I can understand if people are sceptical. It's so surreal," she said.

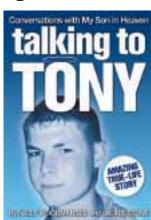

"There was no explanation when it started happening. My arm made a creaking, grinding noise and I thought it was a trapped nerve. I'd look down and my arm would be hovering. But the overwhelming sense of calm I felt when it happened – all the turmoil disappeared – I couldn't explain it."

It started happening when she arrived back from hospital after Tony passed away. The former Herne Bay High pupil suffered serious head injuries in a car crash on the A291 Canterbury Road on October 28, 2010, in which he was a passenger.

According to the family, unusual things started to happen almost im-

MOTHER'S LOVE: Sally Woodmansee

AUTOMATIC SPIRITUAL WRITING

MEDIUMS believe this is a way of communicating with the spirit world using a pen and paper.

According to Psychic Victoria, from Ashford, it involves allowing the spirit to flow through a person directly to their hand in order to quide and create words.

She said: "Spirits do not enter inside your physical body, but will come very close to you.

"Their hand will come into contact with yours and then write through your hand that is holding the pen. The words that are written will not be of your own thoughts, and the feeling that accompanies this will be unmistakable."

mediately after his death.

At his funeral, the congregation was left baffled by strange events.

"The CD kept skipping back to just two of the songs," said Mrs Woodmansee. "Then the vicar kept stopping through her readings – it would take her minutes to start up again.

"I looked over at my eldest son and he was sniggering, but I thought it was nerves. Oliver later told me that as he'd walked into the funeral he'd said to Tony that if he was there and okay, to send a message by messing with the music or making the vicar forget her words. It was him sending a message, but it took me a while to accept it was really happening."

It wasn't until two of Tony's friends went to see a medium that Mrs Woodmansee was convinced her dead son was trying to get in touch with her.

"Two girls had booked to see a medium before Tony passed and it fell on the day of the funeral," she said. "The medium said a young man called Tony who had died in a car crash had come through and had done something strange – he had sprinkled Oxo cubes on her head. I knew straight away it was him.

"Tony had Oxo cubes in everything. The first time I went shopping after he passed I was unpacking food and a box of Oxo cubes fell off the shelf."

When things started to happen every day, Mrs Woodmansee decided to visit the medium herself, convinced her son was trying to make contact.

"When I got there she said she was glad I had come: Tony had been hassling her all the time. There were things she said about him she just couldn't have known. Only I knew.

"I decided to tell her about my arm, which is when she explained automatic spiritual writing. She said Tony wanted me to ask him a question. I needed to sit in a dark room with a notepad and pen."

So the next morning that's what Mrs Woodmansee did.

"It took about seven or eight minutes before anything happened, but then my arm started to move. It felt like I was making huge movements and afterwards I felt drained."

When she looked at the pad, a faint outline of the word 'Tony' had been written. Amazed, she did the same thing every morning and now has 12 A4 notebooks packed with profound statements 'from her son' as well as loving messages.

Mrs Woodmansee says she doesn't know what has been written until she reads it afterwards. Amazingly, she can often sit for an hour with her arm held up and writing – something most people would struggle with.

Mrs Woodmansee has co-written an ebook called Talking to Tony with former national journalist Laurie Stone, from Blean, telling her incredi-

After controversial 'party' pack for Thatcher's death, now comes Blair arrest kit

By Chrissie Daniels

chrissie.daniels@archant.co.uk

LOOKING for a stocking filler for the politically motivated? Then a gift set containing all you need to carry out a citizen's arrest on former Prime Minister Tony Blair hits the shelves next month.

The Arrest Tony Blair DIY kit comes complete with hand-cuffs, protective gloves and instructions, and is the latest product from a firm in Margate.

The packaging tells buyers to "grab him, cuff him, keep him".

Those behind the product — which goes on sale for £10 from Saturday, December 1 — say the kit is designed for those who believe Mr Blair is a "war criminal" for allowing British troops to join IIS forces in the 2003 invasion of Iraq amid claims of weapons of mass destruction.

The firm selling the range is Red Stuff Shop, the trading name of Screaming Seagull Press Ltd, a trade union volunteer workers' cooperative.

It has made headlines in the past for producing a controversial party pack to be used when ex-Conservative Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher dies.

The new kit warns potential arresters not to "assault, hit, pummel or kick" Mr Blair and to show respect to any security personnel who may be protecting him.

Jon Flaig, of the Red Stuff Shop, said: "The kit is a bit of fun – but it does have a serious side, too.

"Under international law most people would say that by taking us into the Iraq war Tony Blair is guilty of a crime against peace so why isn't he up in court for it?"

But Flaig denied that he is inciting people to commit violence against the former PM.

"This is about making a citizen's arrest, which anyone is entitled to do. We specifically warn people against assaulting Blair," he said.

But former Gillingham Labour MP Paul Clark, who served under Mr Blair's administration, hit out at the kit.

He said: "This is not about serious issues or looking at what was behind the decisions made during Tony Blair's premiership.

"This is a cheap trick to get people to spend their money. People should see it for what it is.

"There are other ways of making a protest and making your views known"

WAR CONTINUES TO HAUNT FORMER PM

TONY Blair's ten-year reign as Prime Minister was a watershed moment in politics, transforming the fortunes of the Labour Party and returning them to power after an 18-year absence.

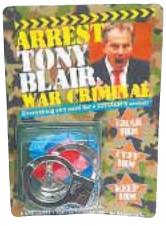

But his time in Downing Street will forever be dogged by his decision to take British forces into conflict in Iraq.

Earlier this year, he was confronted by an intruder as he gave evidence at the Leveson Inquiry into press standards, who accused him of being a "war criminal".

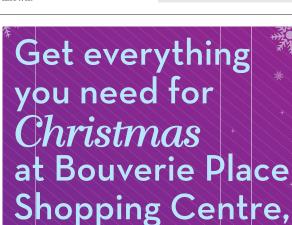

Public appearances he makes in the UK are also dogged by protestors.

There is even a website dedicated to arresting the former Prime Minister with cash prizes up for grabs for anyone who can prove they attempted a citizen's arrest.

CONTROVERSIAL: The Arrest Tony Blair kit has been called a 'cheap trick'

TALENT: Jason Steel and his photograph

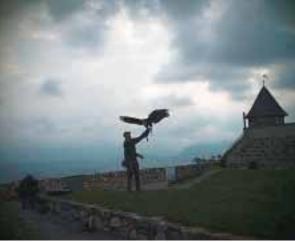

PICTURE PERFECT

A POSTMAN from Bexleyheath has delivered the goods and won a Kent Wildlife Photographer of the Year award.

Jason Steel was selected for his stunning shot of a swan taken on a misty morning at Foots Cray Meadows in Bexley.

He will be presented with his award on Monday at the award ceremony at The Barn Yard in Gore Farm, Upchurch.

TV star and wildlife expert Chris Packham will be one of the judges selecting the winner of this year's RSPCA Young Photographer Awards.

And among those vying for honours will be these two stunning images, taken by youngsters in Kent.

A shortlist of 31 photographs have been selected from thousands of entries, with the winners being named at a special ceremony next

Among them are eight-year-old Stephen Brown from Faversham and his American Eagle in the Dark image in the under-12s category.

Meanwhile, Katie Alston, 15, from Maidstone, will be hoping to impress with her Two Old Birds Sat on a Park Bench picture in the 12-15-yearolds category.

The winners will be unveiled at the RSPCA's offices near Horsham on December 14.

Mr Packham said: "One of the things I love most is that young people tend to use the resources on their doorstep.

"A lot of adults feel they have to go to Africa and photograph a leopard or something, but kids do not have these options.

"Most of them have no choice but to stick to their back vard and as a result we see really simple but often very beautiful pictures of garden wildlife like flies, spiders, birds and ants.'

The overall winner will be treated to a specialist three-day wildlife photography break.

Small boat fishermen lobby Brussels for fair deal

By Chris Murphy

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

FLEETS of fishermen working the rich seas around the county are hoping European chiefs make a landmark change to fishing laws to ensure small boats get a fair deal.

In the latest chapter of the long-running row over how our seas are fished, one leading Kent fisherman insists the controversial quota system should be scrapped and started again.

The chairman of the Whitstable Fishermen's Association, Phil Edwards, was speaking after a Greenpeace mission to Brussels calling on the EU to make life fairer for operators of small boats under 10 metres.

Currently, three quarters of the British fishing fleet, including those in Kent, is made up of small boats, yet they are allowed to catch just four per cent of stocks.

Greenpeace took a delegation of British fishermen to Brussels to demand a new fisheries policy that is fairer to small-scale coastal fishermen. They joined fishermen from across Europe.

ACTION: A delegation of British fishermen joined others from around Europe to appeal to EU chiefs

They said 96 per cent of stocks are controlled by a handful of what are called 'producer organisations', which tend to represent larger boats.

The small boat fishermen are asking that the once-in-a-dec-ade reform of the EU's Common Fisheries Policy be used as a unique opportunity to ensure those who fish sustainably have a right to fish; bringing an end to what they say are harmful subsidies and unsustainable and destructive practices; and ensuring the restoration of the health of seas in Europe and the rest of the world.

Mr Edwards said: "The whole system needs to be thought out again. It is too complicated and unfair to those with small boats. I have a mountain of paperwork to do all the time, and

WHAT ARE FISHING QUOTAS?

IN order to protect stocks of certain fish, European fishing policy dictates each country which fishes in European waters.

has a European directive determining how much fish in terms of weight are caught and at what time of the year.

The quota applies to the maximum weight of a particular species caught on any trip or over any season.

Punishments for over-fishing – and spot checks regularly occur – are severe, and include large fines and even having boats impounded. Therefore, if quotas are exceeded, fishermen are forced to simply throw back the excess fish. Frequently these fish will already be dead – a situation which is widely criticised.

that's while battling the odds to make a living."

He said the system of quotas and leasing quotas from other boats is much too involved, adding: "I think successive governments are just hoping the small fishermen simply give up and go away. The problems are continually swept under the carpet."

Jerry Percy, of NUTFA, the organisation representing hundreds of under-10 metre vessels in the UK, said: "Fishing is a way of life that small-scale fishermen have practiced for generations and that is threatened as never before.

"While not being caused by artisanal fishermen, overfishing has had a disproportionate effect on their ability to survive. If any boats need to stop fishing, it shouldn't be the smaller, low-impact boats that provide fish and directly support communities."

Stones are a work of art

THE Rolling Stones celebrate their 50th anniversary by hitting the stage of the O2 Arena in Greenwich on Sunday in front of a sell-out crowd.

Tickets for the eagerly anticipated show by the Dartford rockers were changing hands for more than £6,000 through secondary outlets this week, with the band performing a second show on Thursday.

To mark the event, the Castle Galleries at Bluewater is showcasing a collection of fine art by the band's guitarist Ronnie Wood.

The images capture the band on stage and limited edition prints are on sale.

Drug stab man jailed

A DRUG dealer who stabbed a man and kicked a woman in the head in a dispute over payment in Tunbridge Wells, is this week starting a 12-year jail term.

Okeeno Brown, 22, of north London, was convicted of causing grievous bodily harm with intent after the incident in July near the town's railway station. He had met a 31-year-old woman and 51-year-old man to supply heroin, but a dispute erupted ending in violence.

How rock legend Jimi Hendrix struck a chord with county as fans prepare to mark his 70th

By Chris Britcher

chris.britcher@archant.co.uk

HE IS one of rock music's most iconic performers; famed for scintilliating live performances and inspiring generations to take up the guitar.

But his tragic death at just 27 robbed the world of Jimi Hendrix. Had he survived, this Tuesday would have been his 70th birthday.

What is a little known part of the guitar maestro's life is his time spent in the county – both due to his friendship with Noel Redding, guitarist in the Jimi Hendrix Experience, who was born and grew up Folkestone – but also the house Hendrix rented in a Kent quiet village.

Coblers, in hamlet of Lymbridge Green, being Folkestone and Ashford, was rented by Hendrix a little over a year before his death. Its name a poorly spelt joke.

For the 14 months he stayed there, it provided Hendrix with a rural retreat from the high life of London where his flat was a haven for the likes of fellow musicians Mick Jagger, Eric Clapton and Paul McCartney.

The five-bedroom, 16th century farm-house was enlarged after his death and is now valued at around £1 million.

EXPLORE GERMAN ELECTRIC HEATING

FROM Sunflow ttd.

Heating is a major purchase in our life. Not just the cost of buying a system but the cost of the energy to run it and, just as importantly, the costs to maintain it.

Maintenance Get rid of the maintenance costs altogether with a Sunflow 12 year guarantee. Nobody inspecting every year and heating that has a life expectancy of 40 to 50 years! A Sunflow heater is well made and hand finished in Germany. So if you add maintenance and depreciation prevalent in other systems this could easily be a 30% reduction in costs in the first 12 years. That's just the start!

Energy Management Often called modular heating, Sunflow German built electric heaters allow total control of heating costs. Every room can be time and temperature controlled, far more accurately than any form of wet system.

We have a range of controls from simple manual thermostats and timers, to room by room remote control. Ask for advice. Whatever controls you choose you will be able to decide where and when to use energy.

WELFARE

PM proposals to cut benefits to the under-25s are slammed by charities

By Dean Kilpatrick

dean.kilpatrick@archant.co.uk

THOUSANDS of young people in the county are at risk of being made homeless if government cuts to housing benefits are implemented, according to a Kent charity.

Proposals – which would see all under 25-year-old claimants taken off the welfare bill – have been put forward by Prime Minister David Cameron in the latest round of cost-cutting measures to ease the state's benefits bill.

But critics of the idea say it could leave vulnerable youngsters in "dire straits".

There are just over 10,000 claimants of housing benefits under 25 in Kent, with the average recipient receiving £80 a week to help keep a roof over their head.

But suggestions young people should remain living with their parents to ease the financial burden on the state has been brought into question by the chief executive of Kent and Medway homeless charity Porchlight.

He said many youngsters dependent on the benefit have fled their family as a result of violence or abuse.

COST-CUTTING: David Cameron

Mike Barrett said: "I do not think the policy has been thought through.

"We work closely with nearly 2,500 people a year, and about 30 per cent of them are in that age group. If they could go back home, they would.

"I fully understand what the government is trying to do in respect of 6699

I do not think the policy has been thought through. If they could go back home, they would.

Their only help is these benefits. It's going to cost the government more in the long run.

setting youngsters incentives to work, but when rents are too huge and mortgages unavailable, their only help is these benefits.

"It's going to cost the government more in the long run."

Mr Barrett added that more people were feeling the effects of the economic downturn and getting in touch with the charity, adding that people from all walks of life are asking for help.

He said: "I had hoped around 18 months ago that it had peaked, but the number of people calling is going up all the time."

Chief executive of national homeless people charity Crisis, Leslie Morphy, added: "There is no way that those fleeing abusive home lives or those whose parents can't house them could be protected if this goes ahead.

"These are people who just need a little help as they start out on their adult lives, not an arbitrary and ill thought hrough cut."

The government believes scrapping the benefit for under-25s would save the state nearly £2 billion a year, although no firm decision on the idea had been made as yet.

A Department for Work and Pensions spokesman said: "We're looking at a range of options for future reforms to the welfare system – changing the eligibility criteria for housing benefit is one of these. Any changes would affect future claimants only and we would still ensure that vulnerable people remain protected."

BENEFITS STIGMA

A QUARTER of people eligible for state benefits have not claimed money they are entitled to because of the stigma attached to them, according to a University of Kent study.

Research carried out by Dr Ben Baumberg discovered that one in four people have either delayed claiming or refused to do so because of the fear of being associated with the so-called benefits culture.

Dr Baumberg said: "When questioned, we found the public vastly overestimate the numbers of people 'claiming falsely or committing fraud', with one in five believing a majority of claims to be outright fraudulent."

Head of policy at non-profit service Turn2us, Rob Tolan, said: "At a human level, stigma is resulting in thousands of elderly, sick and disabled people skipping meals or keeping the heating off, lest they be tarred with the 'scrounger' brush.

"One lady we helped, who was left disabled by a brain tumour, ate porridge five nights a week, rather than ask for help."

Youngster fights to restore graves of our brave VC heroes

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

HE may only be 12, but George Taylor is ensuring the county's bravest war heroes are not forgotten.

The youngster is already responsible for the upkeep of 29 of the graves of those awarded the Victoria Cross – the highest military honour for valour in the face of the enemy.

And now he has launched a campaign to restore the derelict grave of a soldier awarded the VC during World War One.

He was so moved by the condition of the final resting place of Lt Col Arthur Drummond Borton, in St Mary's Church, Hunton, near Maidstone. he is looking to raise money for its refurbishment

The graves of VC winners who died in combat are maintained by the Commonwealth War Graves Commission - but those who lived on are the responsibility of their family. According to records, the Borton family died out with the last known member being a niece called Dorothea who was last heard of in a London nursing home in 1973.

George, from Northfleet, was inspired to help former servicemen at the age of eight when he was moved to tears by a news item about a veteran having to sell his medals to pay heating bills.

Pictures of a vandalised VC holder's grave further upset him and he contacted the Victoria Cross Association asking how he could help.

Dave Taylor, George's father, said: "They said it all comes down to money, so he started sending in £5 of his pocket money each month, He then became the youngest person in the UK tasked with tracking down derelict graves of VC holders and reporting on their condition.'

George went online to locate the final resting places of the VC holders buried in Kent and followed up with visits. It was then he encountered Lt Col Borton's memorial, covered in rotting foliage with its inscription all but erased.

George said: "It's just so wrong and I don't like it. After all he went through surely he must deserve better than this?

He then started his fundraising. George's parents and sister Katie, 10, are behind his activities, which have also made classmates at Northfleet Technical College proud.

His interest in the military was sparked by museum visits with his father and a family with a strong background of service.

George has written about the plight of war veterans to Prime Minister David Cameron and US President Barack Obama.

He has also met the Oueen, who sent him a good luck telegram before a sponsored walk, and thrown poppies into the Trafalgar Sqaure fountains as part of Remembrance Day.

George, who has written to MI6 asking for work experience and wants to be a policeman "in the armed response unit" said: "I hate the thought of people in the forces thinking no-one cares.

LIFE ON THE FRONTLINE

ARTHUR Drummond Borton was born in Chevening, near Sevenoaks, on July 1, 1883, and educated at Eton and the Royal Military College Sandhurst, before being commissioned into the 60th Rifles, with whom he served in the South African War.

Retiring from the Army in 1910, he rejoined in 1914 and after service with the King's Royal Rifles he became an observer with the Royal Flying Corps in France, where he broke his neck in three places and was declared unfit.

Despite this he went to Gallipoli as a Lieutenant Commander in the Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve where he won the DSO.

Next appointed Army Second-in-Command of the 2nd/22nd London Regiment in June 1916, he served in France and Palestine. Lt Col Borton won his VC at Tel-el-Sheria, Palestine, on November 7, 1917, when he led his attacking companies against a strongly held enemy position as the British fought an army of Ottoman Turks. He was decorated by King George V and later served in the North Russian campaign of 1919.

He was a pall bearer at the burial of the Unknown Warrior on November 11, 1920. The hero died on January 5, 1933, in Southwold, Suffolk, and his award is in the regimental museum at Clandon in Surrey.

Historic documents come alive at touch of a button

By Chris Murphy

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

A HIGH-tech system designed to allow everyone to explore rare and ancient documents, has been created by academics.

Experts at the University of Kent have developed a system to digitise documents which previously could only be studied under severe restrictions due to their delicate and valuable nature.

The new software system, called DocExplore, means the files can stop gathering dust and be easily accessed alongside detailed explanations.

It's an ambitious project led by Dr

EXPLORE: The software provides extra information with your documents

Richard Guest and Professor Michael Fairhurst from the university's school of engineering and digital arts. It has just been launched at an international workshop in Rouen, France, and is set to move in to its next phase.

Unveiling the system, Dr Guest said: "We were delighted to present the software to academics, scholars and museum curators at the workshop which acted as a unique backdrop to share experiences and knowledge on exploring historical documents from within a range of disciplines."

The next stage involves a public exhibition for Canterbury residents to access documents held in the cathedral's archives using touch screens.

Dr Guest said the system acts so that examining the documents has the 'feel' of having it right in front of the user. He said it simulates, as far as possible, the experience of accessing the physical object itself. But users can see much more than the document – they can access translations and transcriptions, read more about the period in which it was written, its contents and who would have used it at the time by using the additional text, picture, sound and video resources that are a feature of the system.

It also allows scholars to explore many unique features of a document such as handwriting analysis and text searching.

Dr Guest said: "We are extremely excited to be entering the final phase of the DocExplore project, which will open up rich collections of key documents and make them digitally accessible to the public.

"The people of Kent will be able to learn and interact with significant documents, whilst exploring the history of the region through its records dating back many centuries."

The University of Kent teamed up with the University of Rouen to develop the software.

In addition to showcasing the newly-developed software, the workshop encouraged cross-Channel dialogue for the first time between professionals involved in the development of techniques to support the analysis and management of digital documents.

FAMILY: Curator Alice Martin with an oil portrait of Leonard Jerome, Churchill's American grandfather

International bloodlines converged to create a truly remarkable leader

By Chris Murphy

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

A MAJOR exhibition at the home of Winston Churchill, examining his little known Anglo-American links, is under way.

The display is called In the Blood and is the first-ever temporary exhibition at Chartwell.

It explores the extraordinary story of Churchill's Anglo-American ancestry and considers how the two branches of his family – the Jeromes of New York and the Dukes of Marlborough of Blenheim – shaped his incredible character and life.

In a time when races were strictly divided by society, his American grandmother Clarissa is believed to have had Iroquois Indian blood. Meanwhile, the 1st Duke of Marlborough, John, fought heroically on the battlefield.

The National Trust, which runs the house, said this is a fascinating and compelling blend of British tradition and New World adventure, energy and enterprise. The transatlantic genetic inheritance created perhaps the greatest British wartime leader.

The display takes visitors behind the scenes of Churchill's childhood to reveal his touching relationship with his beloved nanny 'Woomany' as well as the complex relationships with his mother and father, Lord and Lady Randolph.

A wide range of objects have been gathered from around the world, half of which have never been displayed before.

The major highlights to look out for are the pair of duelling pistols and Garter Star belonging to Churchill's 17th century ancestor John, 1st Duke of Marlborough, the builder of Blenheim Palace.

Then there is the charcoal drawing of Churchill's glamorous Brooklyn-born mother Jennie Jerome by society artist John Singer Sargent, and diamond, ruby and sapphire rings given by Churchill's father to his mother, items which have been reunited especially for this exhibition.

Significant family portraits and even locks of his hair as a child are available to view.

Randolph Churchill, Winston's great-grandson, said: "I am delighted to have been able to loan a number of family objects for display at Chartwell this winter.

"This exhibition shines a light on Winston's parents and his forefathers, who were so important in giving him the backbone he had in the dark days of 1940.

"Indeed he later wrote of that time: 'I felt as if I were walking with destiny, and that all my past life had been but a preparation for this hour and for this trial'"

Historian Professor Sir David Cannadine, added: "It is a timely innovation at Chartwell to begin holding and hosting exhibitions which help us to understand more fully the extraordinary range and richness of Churchill's life.

"His Anglo-American ancestry was very important to him personally, and became very important to him politically. In the Blood helps us understand how and why this was so."

Lady Churchill handed

Lady Churchill handed Chartwell, in Westerham, to the National Trust in 1965.

Curator of In the Blood, Alice Martin, said: "I am personally very excited to see the fantastic oil paintings of Sir Winston's grandparents and the beautiful engagement rings back together for perhaps the first time in more than 100 years."

In the Blood is open from 11am to 4pm everyday until the end of February. Tickets are priced at £6.50 for adults.

OPINION

There are better alternatives

Rehman Chishti considers the implication of a Thames Estuary airport and how it would irrevocably alter the area

THERE are many economic and environmental reasons why the Thames Estuary is not a suitable location for a new hub airport.

These reasons – from the serious threat of bird strikes to the SS Richard Montgomery, packed full of explosives – have been well-debated.

Given this, it is no surprise that the idea has not found favour with the public, the major airlines or MPs. Only recently a survey by Ipsos MORI disclosed that only 16 per cent of MPs support the idea.

But let us consider for a moment, what would be the impact of such an airport on Kent and Medway?

One of the proposals is for a four runway airport, operating 24-hours-a-day and handling up to 150 million passengers a year. Such a vast airport, which would be twice as large as Heathrow, would require significant infrastructure and transport links to support it.

It is suggested this could be achieved by linking the airport to the existing high speed rail service. Whilst there may currently be spare capacity on the train line – Eurostar only uses 40 per cent of it – there is interest from several European train operators in running new passenger and freight services in the next few years.

In short, new train lines would have to be built, carving up our communities and the countryside. It is more than likely we would also witness a repeat of the challenges seen over the High Speed Two route as such lines would pass through parts of Kent and Essex.

And it would require major road access. To avoid congestion the M2 would have to be upgraded or new motorways built to handle demand.

Airports also rely heavily on supporting services and industries and Kent could only accommodate them through the building of vast new industrial estates.

An airport of this proportion would require at least 70,000 employees, which is even more than those who are unemployed in Kent and Medway. It would result in an influx of new arrivals and where would all these people live?

Clearly it would require new homes, schools and hospitals, piling pressure on existing services. To put the scale of this into some context, Medway's annual housing target is 815 dwellings per year up to 2028, far less than the thousands of homes that would be required to support a new airport.

Such developments could threaten our existing green areas such as Capstone Valley and the North Downs Way, located in a designated Area of

New jobs would be decades away and not the jobs we need to create now Outstanding Natural Beauty.
On top of this is the environmental impact on those living in the areas surrounding the airport who will see increased noise, light and air pollution.

Supporters of the scheme say it is worth sacrificing Kent and Medway for the thousands of jobs it would create. But such jobs would be decades away and not the jobs we need to create now and that are being created through our regeneration schemes.

If an airport in the Thames Estuary was allowed to go ahead it would irrevocably alter Kent and Medway.

I do not believe this is the solution to our aviation needs. There are much better alternatives which will be considered as part of the Government's review.

■ Rehman Chishti is the Conservative MP for Gillingham and Rainham.

KOS COMMENT

New archbishop has a challenge on his hands

IS Kent losing faith? Or is it that when a person dies, loved ones would prefer the service to be a celebration of their life, rather than a religious ceremony?

Some will argue that in death, it's only right that religion should play a part, believing them to be moving on to some sort of afterlife.

But gone are the days of the family ritual of the Sunday church visit. While families and friends still get together, it's more likely for a roast dinner than to unite in quiet reflection at church.

One could argue that as long as families get together on Sundays, that sense of community is still alive. Either way, the fact is church is now less popular and the new archbishop has a job to try and get congregations back.

Think before judging

IT would be easy for some to question the grieving mother who claims her dead son writes to her every day.

But whether or not you believe, most will understand the need to find peace in the wake of such a trauma and facing every parent's worst nightmare.

Her comfort is her salvation.

Thank you for your support

PLEASE will you pass on my heartfelt thanks to the people of Kent for electing me as their first Police and Crime Commissioner.

I am humbled by the scale of the vote and the confidence people have shown in me. They can be assured I am devoted to Kent and dedicated to serve the whole community.

In office I will stand by all the issues I have been campaigning on over the last few months, such as keeping party politics out of policing, cutting crime, enhancing visible community policing (Kent's number one priority) and fighting any further Government cuts.

As so many recent events have shown, trust in public life is everything. I will always put Kent's needs and views first Kent's needs and views first.

I promise that you will have the most visible, accessible and responsive police commissioner in the land.

Ann Barnes, Kent's Police and Crime Commissioner

Election raised police profile

MAY I take this opportunity to thank the 16.000 (almost) people in Kent who voted for me in the police commissioner elections last week. Whatever else happened, the elections did at least cause a good number of people to think more about policing and the priorities for the years ahead.

I am sure the electorate chose a good candidate, and I wish Ann Barnes the very best in her new post in her new post.

Piers Wauchope, UKIP

Showing up party politics

IT is with considerable relief that the people of Kent voted for independent Ann Barnes to be the new PCC.

As her campaign communications manager I saw how her message – that our police should be free of political interference – resonated with all shades of voter whoever they traditionally supported at previous elections.

During this campaign, Ann was subjected to so many attacks and aspersions about when she was the chair of the Kent Police Authority and her independent candidature.

It became lamentable that certain candidates would stoop to such gutter tactics. They focused on attacking Ann instead of talking about how they would manage the future of our police itself.

Ann rose above these attacks and stuck to her guns to achieve a landslide victory with 65 per cent of the vote.

She was up against the might of the Conservative Party's monopoly in Kent, with 17 MPs to call upon and huge numbers of foot soldiers.

Ann won because of her principled message and the dedication of a small, group of brilliant and loyal volunteers, including the wisdom of the Gurkha campaigner, Peter Carroll, who delivered a volteface in how the police should be managed.

I can truthfully say that with the total distrust of the main party politicians as a key factor for their demise, the campaign tactics of a few have contributed further to the climate of cynicism around "party first" politicians. The Maidstone and Weald MP is a case in point. All over the voter when campaigning, but when in power only support their party and careers.

Ann Barnes will put people of Kent first. Watch this space.

Howard Cox, Cranbrook

Incredulous at Westminster

THE numbnuts in Westminster continue to live in denial.

Now they're having a review as to why the turnout was so low for the PCC elections.

They really expected us to rush down to vote in a blind auction. The equivalent of being blindfolded and asked to throw a dart at a wall with some unknown names on it. Are they for real? Should they really be running a country? They haven't a clue.

Phil Granger, West Malling

We, the public, have spoken

A GOOD government listens to the voice of the people. Nationally, on November 15, the people spoke very clearly.

The majority did not agree that the post of PCC should be a political one. Therefore, they either stayed at home, voted for the independents or made it clear on their ballot papers.

Remarks made on spoiled ballot papers, as seen on TV, were short and concise. These are the opinion of the public and should be published.

The people, by their actions, have spoken with eloquence.
They have the right to be heard.

The cameras save lives

I AM shocked when I read letters criticising the use of speed cameras. It was reported earlier this year that since speed cameras were introduced here, in 1992, the average number of people killed on our roads has more than halved from 11 each day to five.

Of course, speed cameras may not have been responsible for all this, but individual trials show that they work. In one west London trial at 21 sites in 1997, the death rate fell two thirds in three years.

Even if only half of the reduced death rate is due to speed cameras, that is still three people's lives saved daily.

Of course, it is frustrating when one is caught by a speed camera, but the solution is simple. Obey the speed limit.

Richard Mountford, Hildenborough

Disabled being made to pay

PEOPLE across the UK are taking action against cuts to disability benefits as part of the Hardest Hit Campaign.

With these cuts coming over the next few years, it will make travelling to hospitals worse due to extra parking fees or finding the money for taxis. Living with my disabled child I wonder where it will end.

I am urging readers to speak out because there are huge human costs to the Government targeting disabled people—losing support could lead to isolation and declining health. In addition, the Government wastes millions in the cost of appeals from flawed assessments, and risks long term costs because cuts to benefits like Disability Living Allowance will make it harder to cope.

The timing is critical as the Government is making decisions about benefits now, announcing its intention to cut £10 billion from welfare. Already £9bn has been cut from disability benefits and services, and the Government must rule out targeting disabled people for further 'savings' in the 2013 Budget.

On the road to find the next generation of entrepreneurs

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

THE Grow For It campaign, which is promoting business investment and entrepreneurship in east Kent, took to the streets with a bus tour this

To celebrate Global Entrepreneurship Week, business experts were on hand to advise those wishing to set up or expand their commercial activities in how they can apply for funding.

The tour, aimed mostly at young people, was designed to raise awareness of the new opportunities arising as a result of a cash injection into the area from the Government's Regional Growth Fund.

A total of £35 million has been made available with the intention of boosting the economy $through\ employment\ opportunities.$

Representatives from the Kent County Counciladministered body Expansion East Kent were on board the bus, which visited Canterbury, Folkestone and Broadstairs advising on access to the funding for interest-free business loans.

Mentors were also available to advise on growth and start up, while businessmen and women also gave advice to young people.

Martyn Riley, of KCC, was one of those who met some of the next generation of Kent's business community.

"We have not had an investment in business on this scale before and it is there for people to take advantage of," he said. "In the past, Kent has been sadly neglected in investment because it did not rate high enough on the deprivation criteria, but that has changed in the last few years as Government has become more aware of the situation in the county.

"What Kent can offer businesses looking to come here is a skilled workforce with a wide range of abilities.

"I have been impressed with the young people I have spoken to. I do not feel that at their age I was thinking about the possibility of becoming an entrepreneur. They also show a great amount of enthusiasm.

The fund is aimed principally at sustainable businesses that create new jobs, although money can be made available to safeguard existing employment positions and the criteria for a successful application is strict.

Many of the young people who visited the touring bus were encouraged in their aims to set up in business.

Amie Rawlin, 16, from St Mary's Bay, visited the bus when it parked up at K College in Folkestone and spoke to the mentoring team.

"It was very useful to talk to experts," she said. "I wasn't actually aware that there was any investment in business in Kent and did not know it was possible to apply for a loan.

"My ambition is to set up and run my own nursery - that now seems more likely than when I stepped on the bus a few minutes ago."

IMPRESSED: KCC's Martyn Riley says the young people he has spoken to during the bus tour have shown plenty of enthusiasm

The Barron of the chamber

CAROLE Barron, director of innovation and enterprise at the University of Kent, has been appointed the new chair of Kent Invicta Chamber of Commerce.

After two years as vicechair, she takes over the position from Henry Nydam, and will now serve until 2014 with Tim Allen of M J Allen as vice-chair.

Barron, a director of the chamber since 2008, said: "I am delighted to have the opportunity to chair the board of directors of one of the most proactive accredited chambers in the South East.

"It is an exciting time. With the growth into the Thames Gateway, the chamber offers a large geographical network of support to our members, led by our chief executive, Jo James.'

James said: "The chamber

"We also welcome three new directors who were elected at the AGM.

"Our board of directors is a great strength to the chamber and we thank all of them for their contribution."

Optimism maintained as moderate growth continues in private sector

BUSINESS activity has risen for the third month running, and while growth was moderate it still showed the sharpest increase in seven months, according to the latest figures.

Data from Lloyds TSB signalled that the South East's private-sector economy remained in growth territory but failed to accelerate notably from September's weak pace.

New business expansion was moderate, albeit the fastest since March, while employment registered a fractional increase following the previous month's job-shedding.

Cost pressures remained stronger than the long-run survey average, leading to a slight increase in prices charged. Private-sector output in the South East increased for the third month running in October.

That compared favourably with a marginal decline across the UK as a whole, although the rate of expansion in the latest period was muted as the Business Activity Index posted 51.0, from 50.3 in September.

Although services activity increased at a solid rate, this was partly offset by another drop in manufacturing production. Total activity growth was supported by a further increase in new business at the start of Q4.

New workloads have risen for four months, and the latest increase was the strongest since March. However, the rate of expansion was weaker than the long-run survey average and new orders at goods-producers continued to Phil Beales, area director for Lloyds TSB Commercial in Kent, said: "Total private-sector output rose only modestly, weighed down by a fall in manufacturing production.

"However, there is reason to be optimistic, as employment stabilised and new business increased at the fastest rate since March.

"The labour market should also be supported in the coming months by the solid increase in service-sector activity in October."

Drop in jobless numbers slows but federation staying positive

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

THE recent sharp decline in the number of people in Kent out of work has halted – bringing disappointment to business leaders hoping for a repeat of last month's encouraging news on the jobless front.

The number claiming Jobseekers' Allowance in October fell by just three people in Kent and Medway to 35,034-a month after the figure fell by 177

A little over half the boroughs in the county saw a small drop in the number of people out of work, according to figures from the Office of National Statistics.

However, increases in Maidstone – up 75 to 2,481 – and Dover – up 70 to 2,547 – meant the overall unemployment picture for the county stayed almost the same. Gravesham's total went up by 25 to 2,569, while Ashford's increased by 13 to 1,962. Medway also saw a rise of 10 people out of work from 6,938 to 6,948, as did Dartford – up nine to 1,751.

The biggest fall came in Canterbury, which dropped 78 to a total of 2,303.

The Federation of Small Businesses said it was disappointed that the decline in unemployment had stalled but members remained positive about long-term economic prospects.

Roger House, FSB chairman for Kent and Medway, said: "It is good news that national unemployment continues to fall and unfortunate that we have not seen the same level of decline in Kent and Medway.

"These are the last figures before the Chancellor delivers his Autumn Statement and he must help to embed this growth by bringing forward policies which help Kent's small firms to grow.

"However, the stats show long-term unemployment continues to rise, especially for women and 16- to 17-year-olds. We know small firms in Kent and Medway are key to taking on people who have been out of work for 12 months or more.

"Recent news that only 16,000 companies have taken up the regional National Insurance Contributions holiday must provide the signal that it needs to be extended to Kent companies.

Not only would extending the scheme to UK-wide micro businesses add £1.3 billion to GDP, but it would create additional jobs and job opportunities."

"Our Autumn 2012 FSB Small Business Baro-

Event highlights Vietnam as the next big thing

KENT hosted a high-level trade delegation from Vietnam that met business representatives in an effort to build trade links.

Organised by Kent County Council and Locate in Kent, the county's investment promotion agency, with the assistance of UK Trade and Investment (UKTI), the UK-Vietnam Networking Event was designed to highlight trade, investment and business opportunities between the two countries.

The Vietnamese delegation was led by Ho Thi Kim Thoa, vice-minister of commerce and industry, and included Vu Quang Minh, ambassador to the UK. They were joined by representatives of the Departments for Europe, Market Regulation, and International Co-operation, as well as a number of Vietnamese businesses.

The event was held at Leeds Castle because of Locate in Kent deputy chairman Warwick Morris's links with Vietnam.

adviser on Vietnam to Lloyd's insurance market.

The morning was opened by Alex King, deputy leader of Kent County Council, before vice-minister Thoa delivered the keynote address.

Delegates also heard from Piers Craven, UKTI deputy director for trade and investment in Vietnam, on why the country offered such exciting prospects for UK companies looking to trade there.

The event included presentations from Vietnam's Foreign Investment Agency on the country's economic and investment policies and from Jack Howell, chief executive officer of Prudential in the country.

"I know from my three years spent in Vietnam and my continued work on UK-Vietnam relations, just how many excellent and varied opportunities there are for UK companies to do business and build important links with their counterparts there," said Morris after the event.

"The UK-Vietnam relationship is developing fast. Two-way trade and investment is increasing rapidly and I hope the event helped businesses from both countries build a better understanding of the other's market, and that links between the two sides will grow as a result."

King said: "That this important event aimed at building trade between the two countries was held in Kent speaks volumes for the county's vision and foresight in developing international relations and encouraging investment.

"While the focus of the event was on trade between both countries, the links and relationships established on the day will doubtless be rewarded in the future by Vietnamese investment here in Kent."

Communication failings put small firms at risk

IN the first survey of its kind, the Federation of Small Businesses has uncovered a serious lack of communication between the Government and companies.

A quarter of small firms do not know there are major changes to the way they will have to report their payroll coming into force in about six months' time, according to the study.

A snap poll of 1,700 small firms found that only 16 per cent of respondents were fully aware of the Real Time Information (RTI) programme – a new flagship way of reporting payroll – and a quarter had never heard of it, despite it being critical to the success of Universal Credit.

RTI is a new programme designed by HMRC to gather regular information about employees. It aims to simplify reporting new starters and leavers as well as making the payroll process simpler and less burdensome.

It will also support the payment of Universal Credits to those who receive them.

Two-thirds of respondents to the FSB's survey are not confident that RTI will achieve these aims.

With less than six months to go until businesses have to comply with the new rules, more than 60 per cent of firms have not had any communication from

HMRC about the changes.

Businesses think that learning new processes to deal with the changes as well as dealing with potential enquiries and inspections from HMRC will pose a challenge.

Roger House, FSB chairman for Kent and Medway, said: "With only six months until RTI is due to be implemented, the FSB has real concerns not enough businesses are aware that is just around the corner. This system is linked to the Government's flagship Universal Credit scheme and we're concerned it could flop if Government does not step up its game in communicating the changes.

"There are a number of steps that a business must complete before they can provide Real Time Information to HMRC, so it is critical that those affected know about it.

"Of the very small number of firms that are aware of the change, 30 per cent have had to buy new software for their business. HMRC needs to act now so that all small firms can prepare their business as they only have six months in which to do it.

"Without adequate communication and education from Government, small firms won't be able to prepare."

Forty-somethings are giving birth to a new generation of businesses

BUSINESS life in Kent begins at 40, according to a new survey.

The study found that the majority (78 per cent) of small businesses were set up by people over that age.

The report, independently commissioned by Viking – supplier of office supplies to small and medium-sized enterprises – also revealed that the outlook for the region was promising.

More than half (54 per cent) of businesses are expecting to maintain their current position over the next 12 months and a further 15 per cent are set to grow over the same period.

"Against the backdrop of the current economic circumstances, it is particularly pleasing to see that the majority of businesses in Kent are expecting to at least hold their ground over the next year," said John O'Keeffe, commercial director at Viking. "The region does also appear to be full of opportunity, with a considerable number of 40-somethings bringing their working experience to the smallbusiness market."

Also in the report, 96 per cent of people in the region stated that they believed that on average small-business workers did more than the standard eight-hour day.

Women's wages under spotlight on WEA course

ADULT education organisation the WEA is launching a seven-week course looking at examining the wages of women during the 19th and 20th century.

The Workers' Educational Association's Canterbury branch will see Working Kent Women 1840 to 1940 begin in January.

It will be held at the Friend's Meeting House in

The course, which will be taught by Alyss Dye, will look at the history of women's waged work during the 19th and 20th centuries and explore the typical jobs Kentish women would have had during this time; from domestic services including housekeeping and child rearing to hop-picking and from pea-picking to paper-making.

The course will run on Wednesday afternoons from January 16, between 2pm to 4pm.

It costs £55.30. There are a number of free spaces if students receive income-related benefit.

No previous knowledge or qualifications are required to join the course.

The WEA is the UK's largest voluntary provider of adult education with almost 65,000 students nationwide attending its courses between 2010-11.

Many of its courses are organised by volunteerled branches - such as that in Canterbury.

To find out more on the Working Kent Women course, contact Gill Hayes on 01227 786603.

For details on how to enrol or other courses currently offered by the organisation, see the website www.wea.org.uk.

Media course makes the news as graduates land leading jobs

HOT off the press is news that journalism graduates from the University of Kent continue to be among the most sought after recruits by leading media outlets and organisations.

The university said recent graduates from the centre of journalism's undergraduate BA in journalism and the news industry and postgraduate multimedia journalism MA, have done well.

They have joined organisations like the Sun, the Huffington Post, ITV Meridian, the Daily Mail, BBC Radio, Sky Italia, and even this What is your

The courses are accredited by the National Council for the Training of Journalists and is also the only UK academic programme of its type to offer a guaranteed placement for students during their studies.

Based at the university's Medway campus, the centre's facilities include two state-ofthe-art multimedia newsrooms and dedicated radio and television

Laura Garcia Rodriguez, who graduated in 2012, is now working for ITV Meridian and attributes her achievements to the experience and passion of the teaching staff.

She said: "I believe the success that my colleagues and I have had after completing an MA in multimedia journalism at the University of Kent is due entirely to the staff and their full commitment to their students. The curriculum is very well thought out and outlines a series of skills and knowledge that anyone wanting to break into journalism should have.

"But it is the professor's passion and dedication that drives the message home.

"They were straight and honest about the industry we were getting into.

This, I believe, is the best thing I learnt from them.'

And centre head Professor Tim Luckhurst, added: "We select excellent students who desperately want to be journalists and who have proved to us that they have the aptitude to make it in this uniquely competitive profes-

College hits the right note as it unveils modern music room

FINDING the right place to fine tune musical skills can be tough and expensive, but education bosses at MidKent College have hit the right

Musical students with an eye on the charts of the future are able to use the new state-of-theart live room.

It is a soundproof facility that gives talented music students the chance to hone their craft without disturbing the neighbours at home.

And it's likely to be one of the busiest places on the Medway campus.

They can practice in private while their music technology counterparts use the latest hightech equipment to ensure the quality of the performances shine through.

Sevenoaks musician and former MidKent

College lecturer Dan Clews – who performed alongside Tim Minchin as part of the Children in Need show - officially opened the live room.

He said: "The UK is the second largest music exporter in the world behind America, and it's very important we continue to invest in the future of the industry.

"I came across some very talented musicians during my time at the college and it's great they now have a room of exceptional quality to practice that talent in."

Louise Molton, head of the creative and visual arts faculty at MidKent College's Medway campus, said: "This room gives the musicians their own self-contained area to perform in, and will really help raise their performance levels. It really is a fantastic new facility.'

THE INTERVIEW

Chris Difford

QUEEZE have done it all. The chart-topping hits, the bust-ups, the questionable rock'n'roll lifestyles and the series of triumphant comebacks. They have been cited as influences by many of today's top artists and their undeniable talent has seen them gather fans across four decades.

South London's premier proper pop group can be truly considered British musical legends as they confirm a return to form with a new album and winter tour.

Fronted by the pairing of Chris Difford and Glenn Tilbrook, Squeeze seem to have something that every band craves – longevity.

Guitarist, lyricist and singer Chris Difford, far left in the picture, has been an almost constant fixture of the Squeeze machine since its birth in 1974

"We're a bit like the family cat – we go out and then we come back again," he said. "We've always been lucky like that – I can't complain, it's a really good place to find ourselves."

For a troupe that can boast former members such as boogie-woogie bastion Jools Holland and serial hit-writer Paul Carrack, eventual recognition within the higher echelons of British musical greatness was surely inevitable.

And those to have jumped on the recent Squeeze appreciation society bandwagon number the likes of Lily Allen, Mark Ronson, Kasabian and The Feeling.

"I don't tend to brush shoulders with too many people like that, but it's really comforting to know your fans include those kinds of people. Our fans are all over the place and all kinds of people, so we're very lucky," said Difford. The band's contribution to music has been

The band's contribution to music has been noted, with the site of their first gig awarded a prestigious PRS For Music Heritage Plaque, something that has also commemorated the debuts of Blur and Dire Straits.

Since their original comeback in 2007, Squeeze have claimed an Ivor Novello for Outstanding Contribution To British Music and a Nordoff-Robbins Icon Award, as well as the Mojo Magazine Icon Award.

It is Difford's lyrics and Tilbrook's music that have kept the legend living on with hits like Tempted. Up The Junction and Cool For Cats. And the good news from Difford is that there could be more to come.

"There's quite a lot of new stuff. That's what we're battling with at the moment – how to fit it all into the set. It's going to be exciting for the audience to hear all these new songs, and that will be exciting for us."

The old creative process has returned for the Frontman talks with Joe Bill about the latest incarnation of Squeeze duo, who have each had relatively successful solo careers away from the group.

"It has been very much like how it was and we have a handful of new songs that we're very proud of. [During the writing] there was no tension particularly, but it takes a while to get back into the swing of things and doing what you have always done. So it took some time, but now we're there and very pleased with it.

"There's a new album there, but I don't know when it's due or when it's planned for. We haven't really talked about next year, but I expect it to be in the first half of 2013."

Having reformed with Squeeze veteran John Bentley and Tilbrook's Fluffers cohorts Stephen Large and Simon Hanson, the band have become a favourite on the festival circuit, with appearances at V, Oxegen, T In The Park and Latitude – they received particularly great acclaim at the seminal US Festival Coachella.

But they have always had their own way of doing things, and their new tour, entitled The Pop Up Shop 2012 Winter Tour, is exactly what it says on the tin.

"The show is recorded every night and there are computers backstage and to burn CDs, up to 60 at a time. Then we go to the merchandise stand to sign them and meet people.

"It became an idea because it's a great way of selling our wares — there aren't many record shops left and we sell our own CDs. That way we can get to our fans quicker than waiting for the normal channels of record sales to go through. I think the audience will enjoy it."

Difford has fond memories from the countless Squeeze tours, but Kent – in particular the Leas Cliff Hall – holds a special place in his heart.

"There are quite a few gigs I loved, but I have very fond memories of Folkestone. I remember we played there once years ago and we were using dry ice and managed to fill the room. For some reason the dry ice wouldn't go away.

"We didn't have any fans or ventilation, so it

"We didn't have any fans or ventilation, so it was like that the whole gig. It was weird, it was like playing in a fog – no one could see us. We had to open all the doors to get rid of it – I don't think we'll be doing that again."

But don't worry – fans can expect all the old favourites alongside their new works.

"Up The Junction is one of the most favoured songs that always gets asked for and we deliver. Tempted is always fun because it's different most nights. That one is really good to play. We're lucky in the variation of the set, so we can swing it from side to side and change it up.

"All I'm doing right now is listening to Squeeze and trying to remember the chords."

Former Housemartin and Beautiful South frontman Paul Heaton will be supporting Squeeze on the 20-date tour, performing songs from his extensive back catalogue.

■ Squeeze play the Leas Cliff Hall, Folkestone, on Tuesday, November 27. Phone 0844 8717627 or visit www. gigsandtours.com to book tickets.

Book signing Ross Kemp on war heroics

Waterstones, Bluewater Monday, December 3 0870 777 0252 www.bluewater.co.uk

AWARD-WINNING documentary presenter Ross Kemp heads to the Waterstones book store at Bluewater next month.

The former EastEnders

hardman will be meeting fans and signing copies of his latest book, Raiders, on Monday, December 3, from 5.30pm.

The book covers six daring raids that changed the course of British history, including Operation Deadstick, the story of the first Allied forces into the fray on D-Day, tasked with seizing two bridges to prevent a German counter-attack.

Kemp is highly regarded for his documentaries across the world and especially his coverage of life for British and American soldiers involved in the war in Afghanistan.

Blake's 100

The maestro of pop art

Updown Gallery, Ramsgate Open to Saturday, December 22 www.updowngallery.co.uk kate@updowngallery.co.uk

AN EXHIBITION of work by Kentish-born Sir Peter Blake, widely known as the godfather of British pop art, is marking the opening of Ramsgate's Updown Gallery.

The show will celebrate the artist's 80th birthday with the exhibition entitled 6 Decades In Print, displaying 100 of his finest works.

Gallery-owner and curator Kate Smith said: "The idea is to bring exhibitions that would usually be hosted by top London galleries to east Kent.

"We've created a space where visitors can view works in a peaceful and relaxed environment without feeling pressurised."

Smith has worked in galleries in both London and New York.

Theatre aimed at young ones

A magical tale

Brook Theatre, Chatham Sat, Dec 15-Sat, Jan 5

01634 338338

www.medwayticketslive.co.uk

A SHOW aimed at pre-school children plays at the Brook Theatre this Christmas time.

The Little Lost Frog has been created for three- to six-year-olds; at 50 minutes in length, it is tailor-made as an introduction to the theatre for youngsters.

Featuring songs, magical lands and special effects, the audience will be asked to help the Little Lost Frog find his way home through a mystical world, meeting fairies and sprites and solving puzzles and tackling clues along the way.

Featuring contemporary dance and mixed media, the show will gently fuel the imagination of small children as they join the Little Lost Frog on an adventure to get his Christmas wish.

Tickets are priced at £6.95 per person.

It's the Santa special...

Take a ride into winter

Romney, Hythe and Dymchurch Railway

Saturday to Sunday, December 1-16, and Thursday and Friday, December 20-21 01797 362353; www.rhdr.org.uk

YOU can visit Santa throughout December on the world's smallest public railway.

The Romney, Hythe and Dymchurch Railway will show families the historic delights of a bygone Christmas, taking them on a magical ride in carriages hauled by the world-famous steam locomotives.

During your visit, you'll meet Santa in his grotto, where each child will receive a gift. Visit the model railway exhibition, listen to a Christmas storytelling session, buy sweets from the festive station stall, take in the snowy scene and enjoy some seasonal refreshments.

Timings and ticket prices are available online.

Great for gifts!

Range of art in history house

Godinton House, Ashford

Friday, Nov 30-Sunday, Dec 2 01233 643854 godinton-house-gardens.co.uk

GODINTON House will host the seventh Ashford Visual Arts Fair in the historic Old Billiard Room and the stunning Medieval Great Hall. It is a great opportunity to see a variety of works from jewellery to textiles, sculpture and paintings of various styles.

Visitors can browse for unusual presents while having the opportunity to meet AVA artists including David Carniegie, newly qualified with a degree in fine art, displaying his paintings and ceramics; Siobham Timoney, with her contemporary jewellery; and Mary Sampson, with her house and garden ceramics.

The exhibition opens at 11 am and closes at 4pm on Friday, Saturday and Sunday. Entry is free of charge.

HOMES

Owning your home is more popular than a big wedding

FOR couples these days, a home is taking precedence over celebrations of marriage, according to a survey.

Newly-weds are favouring mortgages over big weddings in a bid to get on the property ladder, new research from Barclays has revealed.

It showed 52 per cent of UK residents would choose to put their savings towards a deposit for a property.

Also a significant number of those who took part in the study said they would consider delaying - or even abandoning - the actual wedding if they could ensure they obtained a property.

The average cost of a wedding is in the region of £20,000, which could go quite a distance towards ensuring that a mortgage is ready for couples so they can purchase a home.

Also, 13 per cent would consider asking guests for a monetary contribution towards the cost of their wedding instead of a traditional gift.

Property sales are rising as mortgage schemes help new buyers into market

Bv Nick Ames

nick ames@archant co.uk

SALES of homes are on the rise and the market is getting back on its feet, according to recent analysis.

Darren Jones, managing director of Persimmon Homes South East, said he was pleased with the performance of the business and believed it was on track to meet end-of-year expectations.

According to figures from the company, the autumn selling season has seen visitor rates rise 6 per cent ahead of this time last year and weekly private sales rates rise 4 per cent.

Jones said: "House-buyers in our region have been helped by the cost of mortgage loans reducing slightly as lenders access the Government's Funding for Lending Scheme and pass the lower costs through to our customers. $\,$

"The take-up of the Governmentbacked 5 per cent deposit NewBuy mortgage product has also helped our region, with a steady increase in customers purchasing a home with a NewBuy mortgage.'

Persimmon has been trading since 1972 and operates under three main brands, Persimmon Homes, Charles Church and Westbury Partnerships. It added to that tally last month with the acquisition of house-builder Hillreed Homes.

The business has recently opened developments at The Reeds, Lower Halstow, and will soon be marketing homes at Waterside at The Bridge, Dartford.

Jones said: "A critical part of our strategy is the continued investment in new land to support the growth of Persimmon within the region.

"The UK housing market continues to be challenging and mortgage availability remains the key constraint; however, we remain confident of the future successful growth of Persimmon.

POSITIVE:

Persimmon's Darren Jones says the Government's Funding for Lending Scheme has given a welcome boost to the property market

HERITAGE means pride and pressure at Skoda. The Czech marque loves model names from its pre-war heyday, so the range flagship is the Superb – it's good, especially for the money, but perhaps a little short of superb.

Now we have the Rapid, but unfortunately it's not. And Skoda has previous on this one, applying the same name to a coupé based on the dreadful Estelle – one of the final models of Skoda's Iron Curtain era before VW took over.

That wasn't Rapid, either.

Still, putting trade-description discrepancy to one side, the new Rapid becomes Skoda's seventh model and marks a reconstruction of its range that also involves the Octavia – the car that started the modern-day Skoda revival.

The Octavia has long been a little too big for the family hatchback or Focus/Golf sector but too small for the fleet/family car Mondeo/ Insignia sector.

So the next-generation car will grow to attack Mondeo and Co, leaving space for the Rapid.

In so many ways it is the new Octavia and fans will recognise all the traits of their old favourite: value with quality plus dependability and customer satisfaction.

With its Audi-esque crisp shoulder line and what is expected to become the new Skoda corporate nose, it also looks upmarket for a car starting at just £12,900, though you need at least £14,650 to get air-con and alloys as standard.

Thoughts of Audi are dispelled, though, by a robust but simply functional cabin. However, it's vast for the size of the car and allows the Rapid to carry adults front and back with plenty of leg and headroom.

It's also versatile with that upmarket saloon silhouette disguising a hatchback; the tailgate is not a clever two-part job like the Superb's, but a simple tailgate that opens to 550 litres with seats up and 1,490 with seats down—the latter figure makes some estate cars in the segment look sad.

The Rapid is offered with four petrol engines and one diesel, underlining Skoda's view that most demand will come from savvy private-carbuyers

Based on a head-to-head between the 104bhp 1.6TDI diesel and 85bhp 1.2TSI turbocharged petrol models I drove, I would certainly take the latter. Not only does the diesel engine add almost £2,000 to the price, but it's also not much better on fuel and CO2 emissions – you would need to cover many miles to claw back that extra two grand in better fuel economy.

Its weight also dulls the car's responsiveness, not that the Rapid purports to be a driver's car; the chassis is biased towards comfort and Skoda's marketing people were adamant there will be no vRS sporting model to glam up the range.

That sub-branding that will be reserved for the next Octavia.

Driving appeal:

Rapid makes it a magnificent seven for the Skoda portfolio

DON'T LIKE

... the regimented look of the interior, but you cannot fault its functionality and the likelihood that everything will work for years to come.

↓ NOT SURE

... it can stand out enough in a crowd, but Skoda's excellent record on customer satisfaction, plus the price, should mean rapid sales at least.

... the honesty of the car and how it has been presented. Apart from the contradictory name, it does what you expect it to do for the money.

Suzy quattro's face for 2013

WINTER'S here and some drivers may be turning their minds to buying a 4x4.

And they don't combine cheapness and ability better than Suzuki's compact Jimny (from £11,995).

It's been refreshed for 2013, too, with new front-bumper and grille, new seat fabric for the SZ3 entry model, new headrests and Isofix child seat mountings fitted as standard to the rear seats.

Mini is upping the pace, man

BMW'S Mini arm lifts its model line-up to seven next March with a sporty three-door yet versatile coupé version of the Countryman SUV brand flagship.

The Paceman (from £18,970) shares the same nose and will be available with front-whee-drive or 4x4 but is lower and has a more horizontal theme to the back end, which lowers the car visually.

Big sales for Ford mini MPV

FORD'S B-Max baby MPV (from £12,995) sold an astonishing 1,000 units in its first six weeks on sale.

The car's big feature is the missing 'B' pillars between its doors, strengthened to cope with a collision and, when open, creating a 1.5-metre unobstructed opening – highlighted in a Ford TV ad showing a high diver passing through the car before hitting the water.

Eco Rio shows Kia's ambition

By Steve Loader

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

CALLING a car the 'Rio' might suggest some Latin American swagger, but the first two Kia Rio generations lacked the essence of bustling Rio de Janeiro.

Then again, it's probably optimistic to suggest that any supermini can assail the senses like the city of carnival and Copacabana Beach.

But the leap in style and attraction shown by generation-three Rio does at least highlight Kia's ambition – the sort of audacity that has made an economic powerhouse out of Brazil's second city.

Launched last year, the latest Rio relies less on Kia's old value-for-money pitch – including its unique seven-year/100,000-mile Kia warranty – and more on the kind of technology, quality and dynamics that are the stock-in-trade of Western rivals like the Ford Fiesta, VW Polo and Vauxhall Corsa.

And the latest Rio is good-looking, too; more proof after Kia's latest eye-catching Sportage SUV that former Audi design ace Peter Schreyer – the man who created the original TT – is at the helm.

And there's a Rio version that's also one of the most eco-friendly cars on the market.

It's the 1.1-litre diesel tested here and available from £12.095 in three-door form, though ours was the £13.795 mid-spec Rio 2 five-door – five-door variants command a £600 premium over their less practical but sportier-looking three-door equivalents.

In our car the 1.1 diesel offers 74.3mpg on the combined cycle and exemption from road tax due to CO2 emissions of just 99g/km, helped by Kia's Intelligent Stop & Go (ISG) system for best economy during city driving or motorway hold-ups – part of the fuel/emissions-saving 'Ecodynamics' system that is standard on all Rio diesels.

Admittedly, choosing a three-cylinder format for a diesel was always going to be a challenge to refinement, but the little 74bhp unit settles well for steady cruising, helped by a six-speed gearbox.

KIA RIO 2 1.1 CRDI 5-DR ISG: PRICE £13,795

It's never zesty, though, so urban users must ask whether they really do want this version's out-and-out economy, or a bit more welly for cut-and-thrust town traffic – there are 1.4-litre petrol and diesel options, plus a dreary 1.25-litre entry-level petrol, and all will out-accelerate the 1.1's modest 0-60mph in 14.9 seconds.

Whatever the engine choice, though, you get lots of car for your money; though the previous and rather chunky Rio looked like it belonged to the car sector above supermini, its replacement is longer and wider yet appears smaller.

This optical illusion has been achieved by low and rakish coupé-styling, which doesn't actually impinge on interior space because Kia engineers and designers have inserted a 70mm stretch to the wheelbase when compared with the previous Rio, while the base of the steeply-raked screen sits a whopping 156mm further forward than before.

So adults get great legroom front and back, even if the enlarged boot is still only average for the class, while the interior is sensibly organised with decent stowage space.

The durability of the fixtures and fittings is clear even if quality is still a little off the pace in places, but you can only applaud the strides made by Kia in just 10 years.

As ever with Kia, the kit is generous, with the test car coming with air-con, alloys, electric folding/heated/adjusting door mirrors, leather-trimmed wheel and gearknob, electric windows all round, plus Bluetooth hands-free phone and USB/Aux connectivity

Driver feedback is less relevant in this eco version and the slightly vague Rio steering won't worry anyone not bothered about pressing on, though the chassis has good poise when pushed while still delivering good ride quality, so it's worth checking out the other engine options
